

Andy von Bradsky Dip Arch RIBA FRSA

Andy is a Consultant with over 30 years' experience in the design and delivery of housing for the private and public sector, and provides advice on housing related issues, drawing from his experience as former Chairman of PRP.

Andy has a passion for place making, design excellence, sustainability and community engagement, evident from his previous work in regeneration, new settlements and residential design for which PRP has achieved many high profile awards.

He has wide experience of all aspects of the housing industry and advises on briefing, design management, procurement, delivery and post construction activity. He leads and participates in research and best practice development that advance industry knowledge of housing design related matters for the benefit of clients, end users and communities. He supports closer collaboration between professional disciplines of architectural design, urban design, landscape design, environmental and project management services.

He is Chair of the RIBA Housing Advisory Group, which advises RIBA on housing policy issues, is a member of a committee that reviews finance and development proposals for a G15 Housing Association and sits on an advisory panel of the NHBC Foundation, the research arm of NHBC. He is a registered Design Council CABI Built Environment Expert, a Board member of the Housing Forum, and was a member of the Government appointed Challenge Panel that provided advice for the Housing Standards Review from a cross industry perspective. He is a regular contributor to national seminars and conferences.
